

New term, new facilities

The autumn term has started at Brooklands Technical College, and students and staff are enjoying the new facilities and spaces. Excited to have a dedicated space for English and maths lessons, one of our directors, Kate Veryard, has been inspired to produce the poem below.

At the entrance of BTC Weybridge, rising high,
the Tower stands beneath the sky.

Within its rooms, where echoes blend, are numbers and letters that never end.

Fractions, graphs, and algebra's might, written on whiteboards from morning light.

Next door, where quiet words take flight, are English tales from day to night.

The Tower holds both art and sum, where language lives and numbers come.

A home for minds both sharp and keen, a castle cloaked in calming green.

The Neuro Pod launched last year with funding from Surrey County Council.

Learners with an autism diagnosis and an Education Health Care Plan (EHCP), who are accessing courses at Levels 1 to 3, can visit the Neuro Pod.

It's a safe space during break times to relax, meet friends and talk to a learning mentor about any concerns. Parent feedback of this service has been extremely positive;

"The calm enrichment that the Pod brings is a huge benefit to my son's learning journey."

Neuro Pod capacity will increase to support 60 students in the Special Educational Needs and Disabilities (SEND) building, which as part of the redevelopment is due to start construction in early 2026.
